

The Silvertree residence is a study in how a small, dated, closed in and inwardly focused residence can be revived into an inspiring modern space that interacts with the outdoors. The wonderful climate of the Sonoran desert, and the opportunity for indoor-outdoor living, was ignored in the previous floor plan of this vaguely Mediterranean 1970s home. A nicely scaled rear terrace with great desert, mountain and partial city views was nearly inaccessible in the floor plan of the existing house. The user had to either go through the existing garage or through the master bedroom to access the rear patio. A new multi-functional space, and a remodeled kitchen and dining room, all revolve around a new three-sided fireplace. {sidebar id=2}

{sidebar id=1}

© 2011 Secret Architecture. All rights reserved. This document is confidential and intended solely for the individual named. If you have received this document by mistake, please notify the sender immediately. This document is not to be distributed, copied, or used in any way without the express written consent of Secret Architecture.

~~© 2011 Secret Architecture. All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without the prior written permission of Secret Architecture.~~

