

Shubin+Donaldson have just sent us another of their meticulously designed houses. As with the other homes that we featured from this California based Architects notice here a peculiar attention to details that brings each individual space to life.

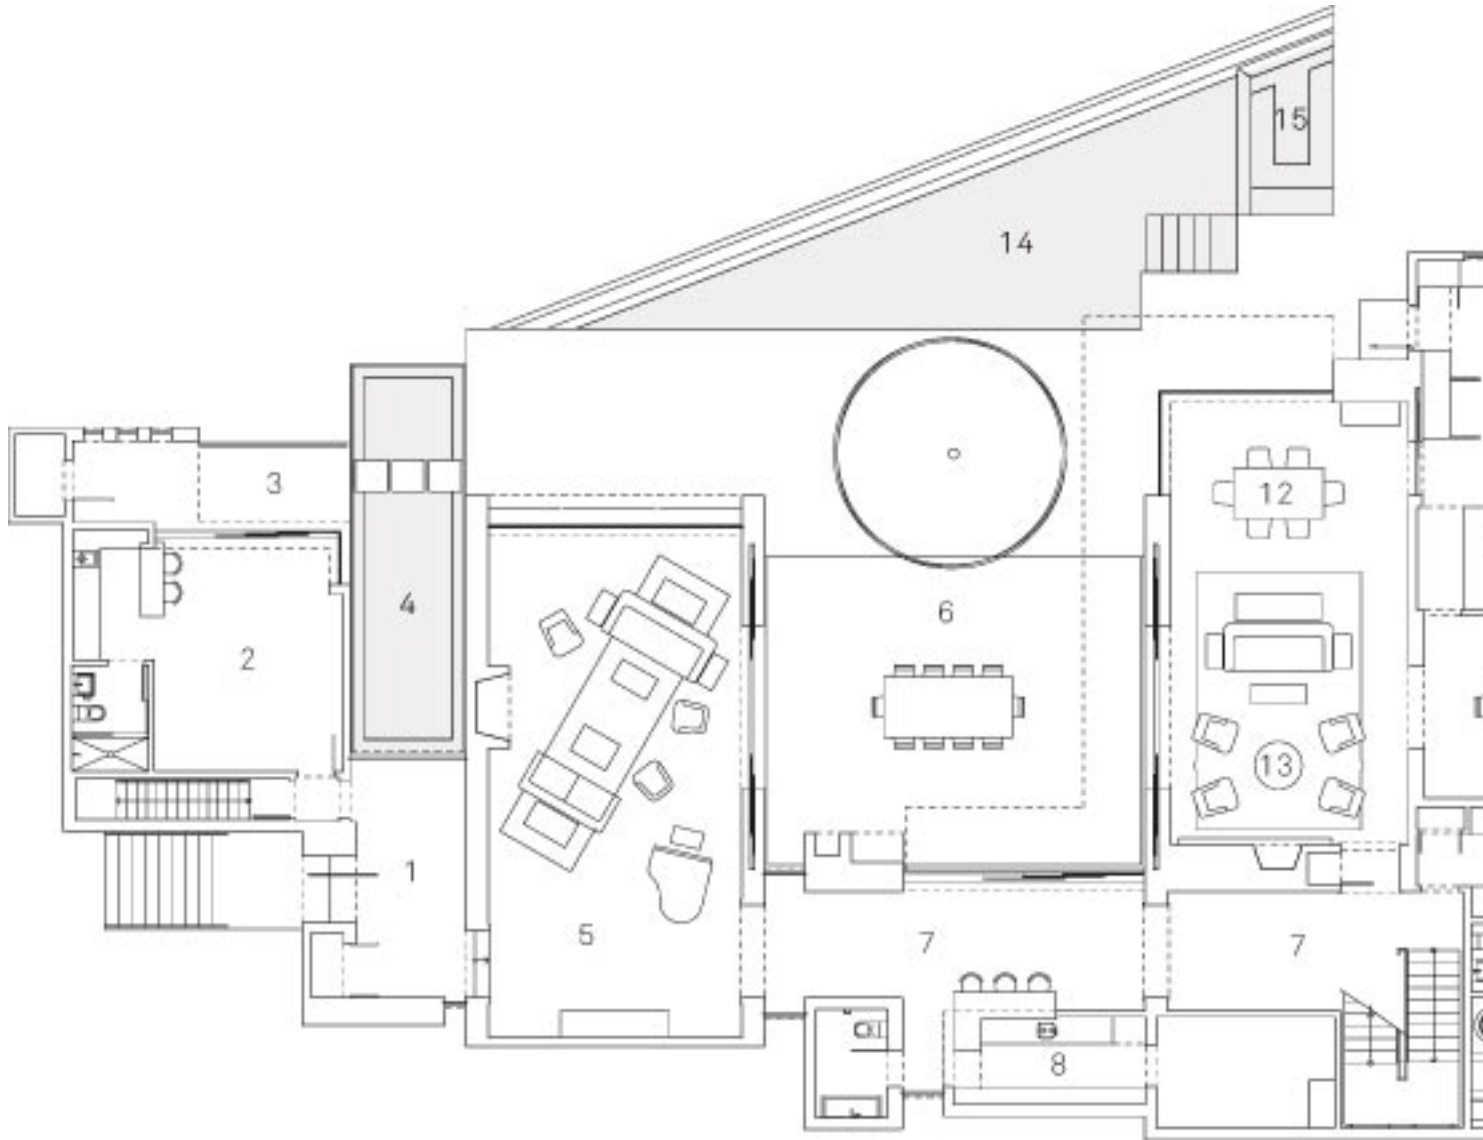

This residence in Bel Air was designed on a site that was formerly occupied by the home that the clients raised their family in. Their intimate knowledge of the location and its sense of place guided the design of the new residence.

REVISION ROOM The client wants to have a room that is a mix of a living area and a dining area. The client wants to have a room that is a mix of a living area and a dining area. The client wants to have a room that is a mix of a living area and a dining area.

The floor is made of large, light-colored tiles, which are a great choice for the side look.
