

The transformation of the Winter Residence by Ibarra Rosano began as a simple request for a bathroom remodel. The owner Jerry Winter and his soon-to-be wife, Desi Rosenfield, were interested in creating bathrooms that matched the minimal and contemplative feel of the modern spas and boutique hotels they had visited in their travels.

However, the spatial quality for which they were looking was in stark contrast to the haphazard flow and disparate finishes of their existing residence.

Photographs by Bill Timmerman, courtesy of the Ibarra Rosano

The existing house was a modest 1940's brick house with an awkward and poorly detailed 1990's addition that trapped the original rooms, prevented daylight from entering the inner rooms and created uncomfortable spacing between the house and original kidney-shaped pool.

Copyright © Ibarra Rosano Design Architects. All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without the prior written permission of Ibarra Rosano Design Architects.

~~the information of this page is not available. Please check the URL and try again.~~

Print Details | View this page as a PDF | Ibarra Rosano Design Architects
Project Completion: 2005

~~Site Area~~ 10,784 sq. ft. remodeled, 35 sq. ft. added