

The house occupies a hill in Montauk with a distant view of ocean. A site that the owners, a couple with two young boys, spent years to find. It is the couple's reprieve from their home in the city, to share the outdoor lifestyle with their family and to remember their teenage years together in Montauk. The house design prompts the owners to interact with the surrounding environment, evoking experiences of camping. {sidebar id=2}
{sidebar id=1}

© 2011 Bates Masi + Architects. All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without the prior written permission of Bates Masi + Architects.

© 2011 Bates Masi + Architects. All rights reserved. This document is the property of Bates Masi + Architects and is not to be distributed, copied, or reproduced without the written consent of Bates Masi + Architects.

© Bates Masi + Architects. All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without the prior written permission of Bates Masi + Architects.

Bates Masi + Architects