

« Form follows function ». This statement has been at the core of Modern Architecture since Louis Sullivan. But how true are architects and designers to the principle when it comes to designing houses. Function has taken a secondary role, replaced in the majority of cases by the formal, spatial, and ideosyncratic requirements.

All pictures are courtesy of Michael Jantzen

Michael Jantzen's innovative housing systems - the M-House

Thursday, 21 February 2008 03:43 - Last Updated Thursday, 21 February 2008 05:01

Michael Jantzen's innovative housing systems - the M-House

Michael Jantzen's innovative housing systems - the M-House

Thursday, 21 February 2008 03:43 - Last Updated Thursday, 21 February 2008 05:01

© 2008 Michael Jantzen. All rights reserved. This document is the property of Michael Jantzen and is not to be distributed, copied, or reproduced without his written permission.

The M-House is a modern, minimalist housing system designed by Michael Jantzen. It features a white, modular design with a light-colored floor and a recessed ceiling light fixture. The room is primarily white with a light-colored floor. On the left, there is a white desk with a white chair. A large window is positioned above the desk, with a vase of orange flowers on the desk. To the right of the desk, a large white vase sits on the floor. The ceiling has a recessed light fixture. A doorway is visible on the right side of the frame.

