The project for the advertising agency Alazraki KP consists of two buildings constructed at different stages. The first one was conceived as a radical intervention of an existing building by transforming its use and image, while respecting the existing structure.

The building is located facing a high speed road that contains a central sidewalk lined with tall trees. Thus the project proposes a new red body housing the lobby that forms a portico framing the 'green' area and that folds itself to announce the agency's logo.

This is a high-quality photograph of a modern office building at night. The building is illuminated from within, creating a bright glow against the dark sky. The architecture is contemporary, with clean lines and large windows. The building is surrounded by a dark, paved area, and some streetlights are visible in the background.
