

The house is located within great surroundings, on Wolfback Ridge Road, in Sausalito, California. The south-facing ridge top site abuts the GGNRA, and is a gently sloping swale with panoramic views from east to west including the East Bay hills, the city of San Francisco, Golden Gate Bridge, Marin Headlands, and the Pacific Ocean. The site flows into the natural habitat of the Headlands, and affords maximum solar exposure, bracing maritime breezes and cloaking fogs.

The architects designed the house to feel as if it has always been there, the Final(Iy) House atop Wolfback Ridge is precisely executed for its owners and its unique site. The universally accessible design reconciles the need for a flat house on a sloping site, meeting the needs of the owners who are nearing ninety years of age. Minimal and honest expression of materials and speed and simplicity of construction result in a modern form clad in a combination of glass and 100 year-old locally reclaimed redwood, and topped with a living roof. Green elements are integral to the overall design principles and ultimate expression of the house

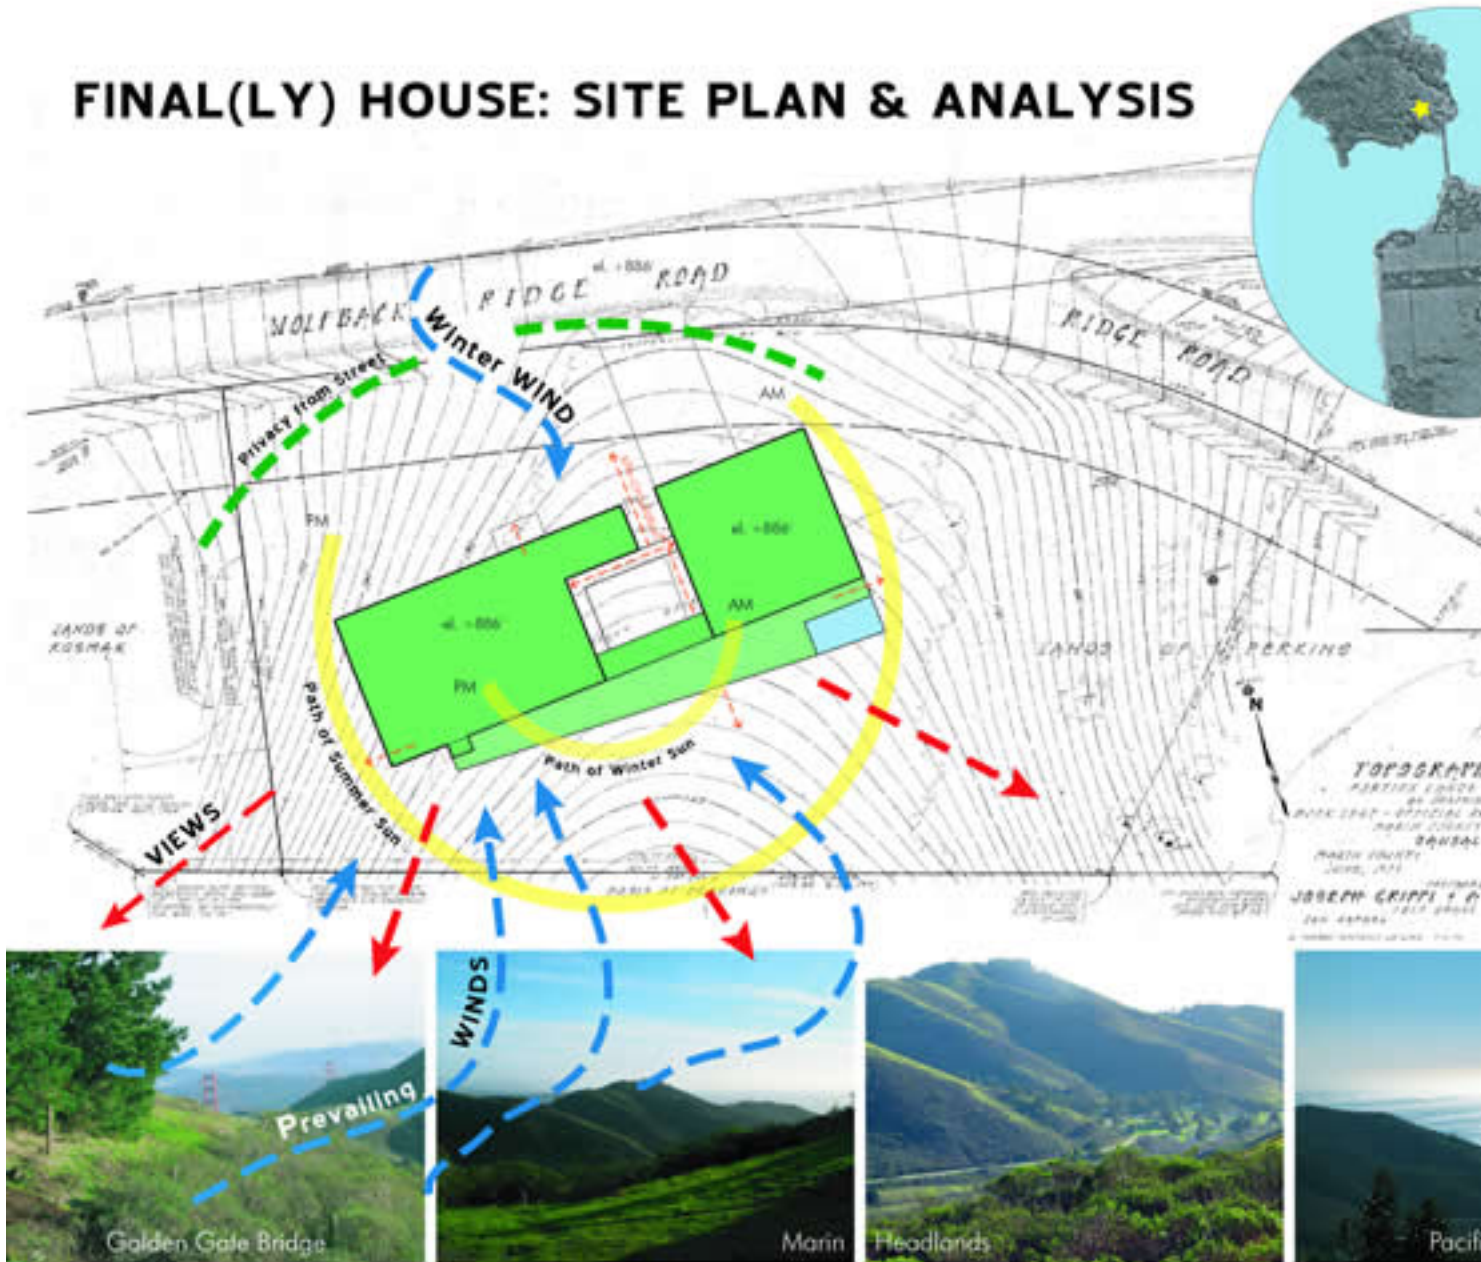

Final(ly) House in Sausalito, California

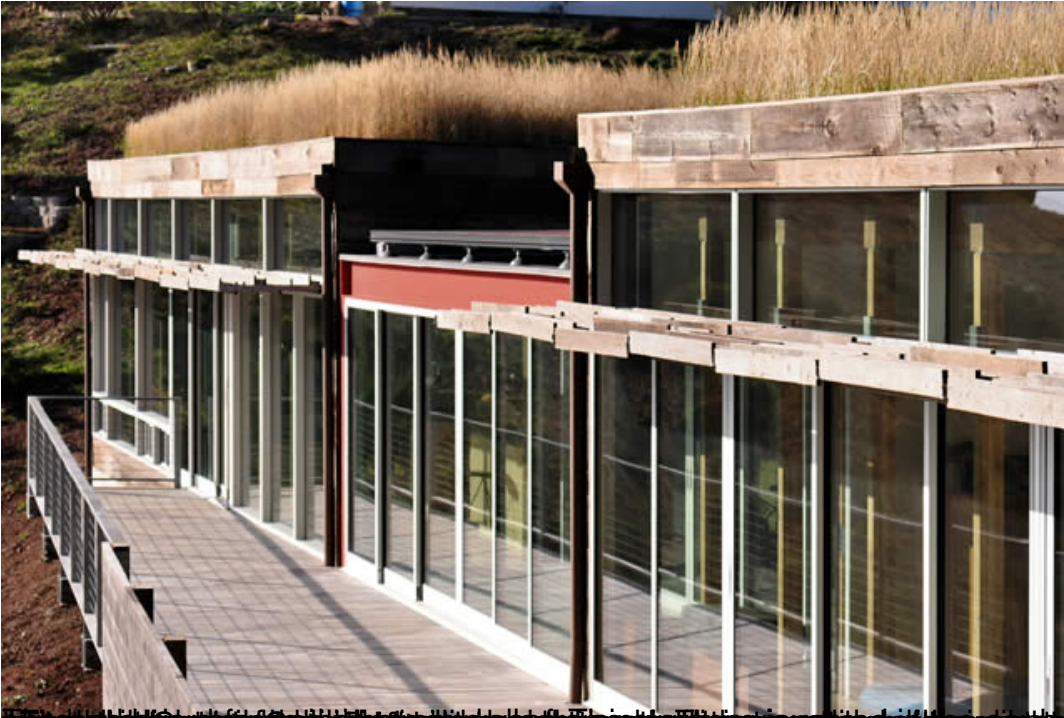

Final(ly) House in Sausalito, California

FINAL(LY) HOUSE: SITE PLAN & ANALYSIS

Standard (the) views are highlighted by the topographic especially are framed www.rothschildschwartz.com

© 2009 Rothschild Schwartz Architects. All rights reserved. No part of this document may be reproduced without the written permission of Rothschild Schwartz Architects.

