

The project constitutes the new corporate offices for the Damilano Group, located in Cuneo, a city in Piedmont, northern Italy.

The designer wanted to break away from the rigid scheme of industrial architecture prevailing within the surrounding area, by producing a free flowing space rich in curvilinear elements that is highly visible from the outside; “an oasis in which to work in a pleasant and relaxed atmosphere”.

Photographs courtesy of Andrea Martiradonna

© Damilano Studio Architects - Coni Rovesci in Cuneo, Italy

After all, the design of the building is a result of the collaboration between the architect and the client. The design of the building is a result of the collaboration between the architect and the client. The design of the building is a result of the collaboration between the architect and the client.

