

An appealing, totemic building that you sense is designed for festive celebrations and young people, and that you might expect to find in Rotterdam rather than the uber bourgeois St-Cloud neighborhoods. Even if it is only 300 meters away from OMA's Villa Dall' Ava.

With its cheerfulness and nonconformism, the building contrasts strongly with the urban development zone in which it's located, behind a new block of private apartments and next to neo-Haussmannian offices and a day-nursery in a similar style. It is with the facing 1930s infant school that it empathises, extending the metaphor of the balcony courtyard, the passageways, the brick colour and the forecourt. As for the 1970s infant school next door, it maintains an obvious affinity with it in terms of shapes, only to dynamite the whole lot.

The Saint-Cloud Town Center, which has many high quality facilities, is a true highlight of the city.

Spaces to be filled

KOZ architectes - Sport and leisure Center in Saint-Cloud, France

