

Hotel Quincy, located in Singapore, was envisaged as a one-of-a kind boutique hotel encompassing all the design aspects from architecture, interior design, landscape architecture, project management and graphic design. This building shows the process of how one design concept is implemented through all design elements, providing consistency in creativity and design.

Each space produced by Ong&Ong is unique, each an individual configuration, providing a different experience. The aim of the design was to create a distinctive, sustainable and timeless space that go beyond the existing boutique hotels. The main concept was to create rooms from different variations and permutations of exterior glass and steel cladding. These rooms were then randomly stacked forming a unique one-of-a-kind exterior façade.

Playground, the standard high-rise office and state buildings. Ong & Ong completed custom and the design of the hotel is a perfect example of modern architecture and interior design. The hotel is a perfect example of modern architecture and interior design.

Original image has been downloaded from the system. All of our labels are created in a spray paint effect. The

The photograph is a high-resolution image of the lobby area of the Hotel Quincy in Singapore, showing a checkered tile floor, illuminated columns, and a view of the city skyline at night.

Strong workmanship and high quality finishes are applied to the walls, ceiling, granite

