

The original program for Ontario’s Credit Valley Hospital, Cancer Care Centre had set the bar quite high for the project, as it was intended "to be the finest hospital in Canada in the hearts and minds of the people we serve." According to the Architects, transforming these words into reality required a deeply thoughtful response to the “individual's physical, emotional and spiritual needs.”

CVH's goal was to reimagine what a hospital should be: an extraordinary place whose look and feel matched their vision. The resulting design (conceived as a clearing in the forest) conveys in every respect the message that "you are in good hands." Sheltering tree-shaped forms combine with natural materials and daylight to give a spiritual dimension to the space. The centre is also the Ontario's first fully integrated cancer care facility combining ambulatory clinics and cancer treatment.
